This information pertains to one of the JICA Knowledge Co-Creation Program (Group & Region Focus) of the Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA), which shall be implemented as part of the Official Development Assistance of the Government of Japan based on bilateral agreement between both Governments.

'JICA Knowledge Co-Creation (KCC) Program' as a New Start

In the Development Cooperation Charter which is released from the Japanese Cabinet in February 2015, it is clearly pointed out that "In its development cooperation, Japan has maintained the spirit of jointly creating things that suit partner countries while respecting ownership, intentions and intrinsic characteristics of the country concerned based on a field-oriented approach through dialogue and collaboration. It has also maintained the approach of building reciprocal relationships with developing countries in which both sides learn from each other and grow and develop together." We believe that this 'Knowledge Co-Creation Program' will serve as a center of mutual learning process.
I. Concept

Background

In developing countries, interest in agricultural products safety has been increasing along with their economic development; however, their agricultural products safety is inadequate due to insufficient production and processing techniques, insufficient distribution infrastructure, and insufficient inspection systems. Since the agricultural products safety is not managed well, consumers do not have trust in the products with little value addition. As a result, the products are sold at a cheap price, and these facts make producers and processors less enthusiastic. Since the agricultural products safety management leads to the promotion of the agricultural sector, it is necessary to improve safety management systems at each stage of food value chain.

In Japan, safety of agricultural products is strictly monitored by a severe regulatory and administrative framework. By observing and understanding Japanese safety management systems of agricultural products, this program offers an opportunity to find possible solutions for improving safety management systems in developing countries.

For what?

This program's aims are to encourage participant's comprehension of Japanese safety management systems of agricultural products and to enhance the participant's capacity for improving safety management systems of agricultural products in their countries.

For whom?

This program is offered to administrative agencies of central or local government that engage in planning and supervising safety management of agricultural products.

How?

Participants shall have opportunities to learn Japan's safety management systems of agricultural products through site visits and lectures by Japanese government officials, farmers, distributors and processors. Participants will also share and discuss each country's issues on safety management systems of agricultural products. Through findings from Japanese systems and discussion among participants, possible solutions for improving safety management systems will be determined.

For Your Reference

JICA and Capacity Development

The key concept underpinning JICA operations since its establishment in 1974 has been the conviction that “capacity development” is central to the socioeconomic development of any country, regardless of the specific operational scheme one may be undertaking, i.e. expert assignments, development projects, development study projects, training programs, JOCV programs, etc.

Within this wide range of programs, Training Programs have long occupied an important place in JICA operations. Conducted in Japan, they provide partner countries with opportunities to acquire practical knowledge accumulated in Japanese society. Participants dispatched by partner countries might find useful knowledge and re-create their own knowledge for enhancement of their own capacity or that of the organization and society to which they belong.

About 460 pre-organized programs cover a wide range of professional fields, ranging from education, health, infrastructure, energy, trade and finance, to agriculture, rural development, gender mainstreaming, and environmental protection. A variety of programs and are being customized to address the specific needs of different target organizations, such as policy-making organizations, service provision organizations, as well as research and academic institutions. Some programs are organized to target a certain group of countries with similar developmental challenges.

Japanese Development Experience

Japan was the first non-Western country to successfully modernize its society and industrialize its economy. At the core of this process, which started more than 140 years ago, was the “adapt and adopt” concept by which a wide range of appropriate skills and knowledge have been imported from developed countries; these skills and knowledge have been adapted and/or improved using local skills, knowledge and initiatives. They finally became internalized in Japanese society to suit its local needs and conditions.

From engineering technology to production management methods, most of the know-how that has enabled Japan to become what it is today has emanated from this “adaptation and adoption” process, which, of course, has been accompanied by countless failures and errors behind the success stories. We presume that such experiences, both successful and unsuccessful, will be useful to our partners who are trying to address the challenges currently faced by developing countries.

However, it is rather challenging to share with our partners this whole body of Japan’s developmental experience. This difficulty has to do, in part, with the challenge of explaining a body of “ tacit knowledge,” a type of knowledge that cannot fully be expressed in words or numbers. Adding to this difficulty are the social and cultural systems of Japan that vastly differ from those of other Western industrialized countries, and hence still remain unfamiliar to many partner countries. Simply stated, coming to Japan might be one way of overcoming such a cultural gap.

JICA, therefore, would like to invite as many leaders of partner countries as possible to come and visit us, to mingle with the Japanese people, and witness the advantages as well as the disadvantages of Japanese systems, so that integration of their findings might help them reach their developmental objectives.
